LOUISVILLE SOCIETY GIRL

Elopes With Man Charged With Forgery.

Youthful Adventurer Tried to Get Money From Large Banks.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 18.—The startling announcement came yesterday that O. J. Hodgkinson, alias C. L. Barnes, who was arrested at the Southern National Bank here Monday on a charge of forgery preferred against him by the Shelby County Trust and Banking Company, and who disappeared for some time immediately following his escape from jail on a cash bond of $500, and Miss Hattie Barnbridge, prominent in local society, daughter of Paul Barnbridge, a Federal storekeeper gauger, who lives at 301-12 West St. Catherine Street, were married at Lexington, Ky., Tuesday morning.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. H. Carls, 611 Grand Ave., Lexington. Hodgkinson or Barnes, and his fiancée, Miss Hattie Barnbridge, who was a young lady of 21, and who was a member of the Lexington Y. W. C. A., were the only guests at the wedding.

The happy pair are homeward-bound with the police and detectives of Louisville, and maybe other cities, but on the trail.

Last Monday morning the youthful adventurer gave his name as 18-year-old and of the Shelby County Trust and Banking Company, and presented a check for $500, signed payable to C. L. Barnes. He explained the check was in payment for the $1,000 to his credit and gave him a check.

He requested the cashier to deposit on a Louisville bank for the balance. His wife was employed with, and came outside the bank, ran to a garage, jumped into his automobile, recently purchased in this city, and sped away in the direction of Louisville.

He was just entering the Southern National Bank here when the forgery was discovered at Shelbyville. Almost immediately the Shelbyville bank officials notified the Louisville bank, and Barnes, if that be his real name, was arrested after an exciting chase through the streets.

In less than five minutes after he was placed in jail his attorney, Glen W. Hummel and Robert Haugen, secured his release on a cash bond of $500. Hodgkinson, alias Barnes, presented the attorney with his automobile and disappeared, leaving behind him an angry count, complaining bankers and disgruntled policemen, who were charged with rewards said to aggregate $1,000.

Hodgkinson, or Barnes, had been gone but a short time before Miss Barnbridge, with only a few belongings in a small suitcase, left her home in West St. Catherine Street. She told her mother that she was going on a short trip to Cincinnati to do some shopping. She was accompanied by Cunningham by Miss Ann Hayes, a buyer for a dress for military concern.

The meeting between Miss Hayes and Miss Barnbridge on the trip to Cincinnati was purely a chance meeting. The former had no idea that her traveling companion, if indeed, the latter herself had formed any plans in advance intended to go marry.

In Cincinnati Miss Barnbridge, according to the belief that prevails here, met Hodgkinson, or Barnes, by accident. When Miss Hayes was taken into her confidence she agreed with her companion and tried to dissuade the young girl from taking the man. Miss Barnbridge, however, was obstinate and the rest was easy sailing for the man in the case.

Miss Hayes left Cincinnati about midnight with the marriage certificate signed by herself as a witness, in her possession, together with two letters, one from the bride and one from the groom, both addressed to the unsuspecting father and mother. Upon her arrival here at 2 o'clock yesterday morning she hastened through the night in a cab to the Barnbridge home and broke the news.

The father and mother, aroused from sleep, were so dazed at the news that it was some time before they could realize what had happened. Both have since been on the verge of a nervous collapse, awaiting word from their daughter.

"She was the victim of undue influence," they said. "She could not possibly have known what she was doing. I do not believe that she knows even now that her husband is the man wanted by the police."

The marriage certificate, however, is to be sent to Louisville by Miss Hayes was exhibited by Mrs. Barnbridge. It gave the name of the groom as "O. J. Hodgkinson" which in the opinion of the parents of the girl is genuine. Hodgkinson and Barnes being assumed titles.

"I never saw him before," said Mr. Barnbridge, "and that was when he called to take my daughter out in his machine with some other young woman. Hodgkinson, alias Barnes, alias Hodgkinson, met Miss Barnbridge here less than five weeks ago. He arrived unexpectedly in the city and took up his residence at 371 South Third Street, the boarding house of Mrs. Eva Brown. It was at a social function in the East End that he first met Miss Barnbridge.

At first sight the two seemed infatuated with each other, and they appeared together at many exclusive parties. Hodgkinson or Hodgkinson or Barnes, however, explained that he was a son of a millionaire broker in Wall Street, and that he was quietly touring the country in his machine to gather information on the markets.

The couple continued to appear together in public and he was known to fact he was a welcome guest in many fashionable homes up to last Monday when his arrest exposed his real character to all except the girl who loved him.

The bride, Mrs. Hodgkinson, is a daughter of Mr. Luke O. Cox, wife of former wealthy capitalist and late president of the Union National Bank. On one occasion she introduced her future husband to Mrs. Cox at the Washington Club.

The following is a complete list of the rewards that have been offered by the police of different cities for the arrest of the man who it is believed here is Hodgkinson:

First National Bank, of Frankfort, Ind., Indiana Prison Board and Hodgkinson's father, $125.
Charles Townsend, Sheriff of Blackford County, Ind., $100.
Bank of Hartford, Ind., where he is wanted for forging a $500 check, $50.
H. C. Webster, of Bankers' Association of Indiana, $50.
Total, $425.

Aged Counterfeiter Held.

Washington, Sept. 18.—John C. Hoffman, an alleged old time counterfeiter, who since 1883 served five terms in prison, is under arrest in Mobile, Ala., charged with circulating bad silver dollars.

Secret service records indicate that Hoffman has had a varied career as a counterfeiter and was released from the Atlanta Penitentiary last March.

While in the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia in 1902, secret service officials declare, Hoffman taught convicts to make counterfeit coin.

After his release from Atlanta Penitentiary in March last, claims bearing the character of his work began circulating in Baltimore.

Cherokee Indians at Central City.

Central City, Ky., Sept. 18.—(Special to The Republican.) Arrangements have been made with H. C. Spencer, owner of the Cherokee Indian Baseball Club, to stop in Central City, Ky., on his annual tour of the country, which he is now making with his savage team. This is the sixth season this team has toured the country. In 1909 the Cherokee Indians played 307 games, won 96, and lost 11; in 1910, they played 111 games, won 79, lost 32, tied 2.

This season speaks for itself and promises Spencer's Cherokee Indian Club one of the greatest, if not the greatest, Indian baseball clubs in the country. Let everybody come out and see the scowling Redskins play ball—shoot the pellet over the plate, hunt the ball, run bases, and occasionally give a war whoop, on the 22nd when they will play the local team at Athletic Park in Central City. This game will be called promptly at 3:30 p. m., on account of the University extension of the W. O. W. which takes place at 2:30 p. m. Let everybody come out and see one more real live ball game before the season closes. Chas. Burden, of Ohio State League, will pitch for Central City. Admission 25c and 50c to the grandstand.

STATE MOOSERS READY FOR FRAY

See New Party Gains in Second.

Sinews of War Will Come From Those Who Have Cause at Heart.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 18.—Arrangements for financing the Progressive campaign in Kentucky were made at a meeting of the State Central Committee in the headquarters at the Watkinson Hotel yesterday afternoon. Bringing away from the meetings which have cast discredit upon the fighting funds of the other parties, the leaders of the Bull Moose campaign in this State offer a plan whereby the sinews of war can be secured from the rank and file of the party membership.

This plan is similar to that adopted in certain Western States. Contributions of membership, coming from $1 to $50, will be issued and advocates of the principles embodied in the Progressive platform are asked to contribute in proportion to their means. By this means the party leaders, taking into consideration the spirit of enthusiasm which pervades the organization can be furnished.

That of yesterday was the first meeting of the State Central Committee, being in fact the formal launching of the campaign in this State. Every district was represented at the meeting. Confident enthusiasm, according to those present, was the dominant note; and the members of the committee, without exception, expressed their conviction, based upon figures as well as hope, that victory will rest upon the banners of the new political organization after the close of November.

Reports from every part of the State were of the most encouraging nature. From every district, every county, every city, say those present, came proof of growing Bull Moose sentiment. The various committees charged with the organization throughout the State is now perfected.

Reports which were read stated that Republicans in many of the strongest G. O. P. counties are falling away from their allegiance to the party which they claim, owed its inception to conditions which no longer exist. In many of these counties, according to the reports, the Republicans in a body, have crossed to the ranks of the new political organization, existing under the banner of the Bull Moose.

Loggie Combs, Progressive National Committeeman and former United States Senator to Peru, one of the foremost advocates of the new movement was among the prominent men present. After the meeting Mr. Combs left for New York where he will confer with Progressive leaders.

W. G. Barrett, Chairman of the Second District Committee, had many things of interest to report to his fellow committeemen. His account of conditions in that district was very similar to that of W. F. Axton, of Louisville, who returned from that section recently, bringing back reports of great stirrings being made by the Progressive Party. Mr. Barrett said that the "agencies" of Mr. Axton, if they erred at all, upon the side of understatement rather than overstatement, and that his district will give the Progressive candidates a flattering majority at the election.

In many precincts, he said, no Republican voters are to be found, all having gone over to the Bull Moose. R. N. Elliott, another prominent Daviess County Bull Moose, says the same can not fail.

The committee called a convention in the Tenth Congressional District to nominate a candidate for Congress to oppose John W. Langley. A convention was also called for the Seventh Appellate District to nominate a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals. A strong campaign will be made in both districts.

Campaign headquarters were opened at the Watkinson Hotel yesterday. J. W. Lawwell, of Danville, is in charge. C. M. Barnett, of Hartford, has charge of the Publicity and Speakers' Bureau. W. F. Axton has gone to Hopkinsville to obtain a big Bull Moose lead and antlers to adorn the headquarters.

at the Watkinson. Mr. Axton and the owner of the property, J. F. Hilde, of Hopkinsville, both assert that it is the largest moose head in captivity. Mr. Axton, however, has not purchased the trophy. The owner, Mr. Hilde, a loyal Progressive, compunged it for the good of the cause in Kentucky during the present campaign. He has refused an offer of $500, for it from a prominent New York Progressive.

Padded School Censuses.

A dispatch from Frankfort says that Superintendent of Public Instruction Markdale Hamlett stated Tuesday that several more cases of padded school census have been uncovered in the past few days and that the discovery has saved the State over $50,000 already. He says he believes the total amount that ultimately will be saved will reach $100,000. Prof. Hamlett says the investigation of the school census frauds has developed the fact that dead people, unborn children and people living in other states and for the school census returns. He will take steps at once to put each case before the grand jury in the county where the padding was done, and the guilty parties will be vigorously prosecuted and sent to the penitentiary, if possible. The school census of a number of cities and counties now being investigated now—and further frauds are expected to develop.

Stork Beats Grim Reaper.

With the births in Kentucky outnumbering the deaths two to one, the growth of the population of the State is no longer of alarming. During the fiscal year there were 12,481 deaths from preventable diseases. There were 9,733 births, while total deaths number 9,751. The "white plague" provided the most fatal disease, its victims totaling 5,123; typhoid fever, 1,625; cancer 300; violence 1,526; meningitis, 699; in gripe 477. Children under one year who died numbered 520; persons 65 or over, 630. The rates of death for ages between 5 and 65 is small.

FINE TOBACCO BARN IS BURNED

Forty Thousand Pounds of Weed Destroyed at Curds- ville.

The Owensboro Messenger Wednesday said: A large tobacco barn containing 40,000 pounds of tobacco and 500 barrels of coke, and owned by Benjamin Thompson, who resides at Curdsville, was totally destroyed by fire shortly after 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Several employees of Mr. Thompson were engaged in "fixing" the tobacco, when a large pile of tobacco fell into the fire. Knowing that if the fire ever reached the dry tobacco it would mean a loss of the barn and all its contents, the men made a frantic effort to fight down the rising flames.

A bucket brigade was formed, but to no avail. The fire spread rapidly and as soon as it reached the dry tobacco, the flames spread in every direction. Before the farmers who could be summoned worked hard to extinguish the flames, but the building was soon reduced to a mass of smouldering timbers.

The barn contained thirty-one acres of tobacco, eight acres belonging to Joseph Sanders, due to William Thompson and Thompson to Xavier Mattingly. B. Thompson who owned the barn, and half of its contents, stated last night that the entire loss amounted to $30,000. There was no insurance.

GUNMEN ARE CAUGHT

Telephone Conversations Give Clue to Retreat.

"Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louis" Caught Short Distance From Scene of Alleged Crime

New York, Sept. 18.—"Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louis," the missing gunmen indicted as two of the actual slayers of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, were found by the police tonight living with their wives in a flat in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn.

They were arrested by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and a squad of detectives who took them to police headquarters and locked them up. They will be arraigned Monday.

The two men had been occupying the flat since August 15, and were alone until Tuesday when they were joined by their wives, through whom clues to their whereabouts were obtained by the police.

The four were sitting at tea when Deputy Commissioner Dougherty and his men burst open the door of their apartment and with drawn revolvers, ordered them to hold up their hands. Neither of the men made any show of resistance.

"Drop your guns. You've got us," said "Gyp" calmly.

"Give us a little time to get dressed," said "Lefty" with equal composure. Scarcely another remark was made to the police by either man until they were examined at police headquarters later by Assistant District Attorney Moss, acting for District Attorney Whitman, who has gone to Hot Springs to take testimony of persons who talked to Sam Scheraga, a witness in the case.

The women, however, made a scene, throwing their arms around their husbands' necks and shedding copious tears. They had to be torn away from the men before the police could get their prisoners out of the apartment, and were later taken to headquarters.

With the arrest of "Gyp" and "Lefty" whose real names are Harry Horowitz and Louis Rosenzweig, all of the seven men accused of the murder of Rosenthal, of which Police Lieut. Becker is the alleged investigator, are now in custody.

The capture of these two men came as a result of what is regarded in police circles as the best detective work done in the history of the department. It was the fruit of unbroken surveillance of the wives and relatives of the men since their disappearance the day of the murder, July 16.

The surveillance was maintained by sixty detectives working in relays who kept Deputy Commissioner Dougherty constantly in touch with what they did and where they went.

The final clue came as the result of piecing together a number of conversations overheard by detectives and reported to the Commissioner at different times.

The first conversation was that "they are not home because they can see a moving picture show from their windows."

Another conversation gave the information that there was a laundry in the house where the missing men lived, which was named either the "New Brighton" or the "Bright" or the "Hudson hand laundry."

A third conversation supplied the fact that the neighborhood "was full of Swedes and Germans." It then became Commissioner Dougherty's task to discover somewhere a hand laundry in proximity to a moving picture show in a vicinity inhabited by foreigners of the nationalities named.

The possible name of the laundry was obtained less than two days ago and the Commissioner discovered that there were half a dozen families of similar names in New York City, and many more in other cities for the Commissioner did not assume that the gunmen were necessarily located in New York.

"When we found the laundry with a moving picture show close by there were no Swedes or Germans in the neighborhood," said Mr. Dougherty, tonight. "When we found a laundry with the foreigners in the neighborhood there was no moving picture show. One of our laundry clues took us to New Haven and we were just about to investigate another in Pittsburgh."

Early to-day Detectives Mayer and Gassman discovered in Brooklyn, the "new Brighton hand laundry" which perfectly fitted all requirements. They set themselves to watch the apartment, situated above the laundry and late in the afternoon were rewarded by seeing "Gyp the Blood's" wife leave the building and do an errand at a store.

Women to Use Whips.

Larned, Kan., Sept. 18.—Housewives and clubs are the weapons the women's anti-gambling association of Larned members of which threatened today to use them upon the city's gamblers if they do not have the home loving husbands of this town, alone.

Following futile efforts by the police to rid the town of the gamblers the women met today and issued an ultimatum that they intended to take the law into their own hands.

"The Thirty and Nine," Or, Why Stop With One?

By JOHN B. M'FERRAN, Chairman Educational Committee,
Louisville Commercial Club

II.

LOOKING at our educational problems from a business standpoint, we have been turning too much to what is called higher education. I am myself a believer in higher education. I mean by that the universities, colleges and high schools and would not detract from their importance in the least, but they are already liberally provided for far in advance of our common schools.

We are told by the United States bureau of education "that more than two-thirds of our boys in the United States leave school before the end of the eighth grade;" "that the average length of a boy's schooling is less than six years, and this school training before the ages of twelve to fourteen years, while the boy is too young to appreciate his loss;" "that less than one boy in four completes the grammar grades and but one boy in eight goes any further with his schooling;" "that only one boy in forty of those who enter the first year of high school completes the course in high school, public or private, or goes higher;" "that of all boys twelve to fourteen years of age who should certainly be in school less than 60 per cent are there."

From the Sage Foundation fund's reports we are told that of 100 boys who enter the first grade only fifty-five enter the fifth grade, only twenty-seven are left in the eighth grade, six in the high school and one to enter college; that only 5 per cent of the males in the nation are fitted by definite educational training for their occupations or vocations.

These facts are given on high authority, and when we remember that they apply to the country at large and that Kentucky is probably below this average, is it not lamentable? IF ONLY ONE BOY IN FORTY COMPLETES THE HIGH SCHOOL COURSE IS IT NOT VERY IMPORTANT FOR US TO GO MORE STRENUOUSLY AFTER THE OTHER "THIRTY AND NINE?"

I think at present we, educators and all, are following the old trend of looking too exclusively toward the higher education. I think our legislative bodies have illustrated this when four years ago they made it mandatory on every county in the state to build a high school within two years. There was little mandatory concerning the poor, small schools scattered throughout the counties. These "thirty and nine" poor devils will have little chance to get within sight of a high school at all, but must plod along as best they may.

It is true the same legislature allowed the fiscal court to levy a tax of 20 cents on the $100 for school purposes in each county. It is also true that many of the counties levying this tax have used it largely in establishing a high school at the county seat or some other town, which is unfair to these "thirty and nine" who do not get to the high school.

I DO NOT WISH TO BE UNDERSTOOD AS OPPOSING HIGH SCHOOLS OR HIGHER EDUCATION—I AM IN FAVOR OF BOTH TO THE LIMIT—BUT I AM COMPLAINING THAT ONLY ONE BOY IN FORTY SHOULD HAVE THE LION'S SHARE OF THE FEAST INTENDED FOR ALL. I THINK THIS SHOWS CLEARLY THE NEED OF MORE MONEY FOR OUR SCHOOLS, SO THAT ALL MAY HAVE A FAIR SHOW.

There is, I think, another mistake that ought to be corrected as far as possible, and that relates to the pay of teachers by location or with reference to location. The cities and large towns and wealthier portions of the counties have the pick of the teachers because they pay higher salaries and the environment generally is more attractive. Thus the back districts in the counties (where there are generally more children) are compelled to get along with the cheapest and poorest teachers. These teachers, as a rule, have the minimum salaries. Now, I hold that these "thirty and nine" out in the back districts for good results need the best teachers or at least as good as the best.

This condition can be met at once by the county boards supplementing the salaries of teachers in the poor districts out of the county funds. Such action would bring immediate relief. WHY WAIT ONE YEAR OR TWO YEARS FOR LEGISLATIVE ACTION WHEN THERE IS A TEMPORARY WAY OUT OF THE DIFFICULTY PENDING IMPROVEMENT IN LEGISLATION? Think of the uplift given to the citizens of another generation even by a single term of schooling! Is it not little short of criminal to fail to apply a remedy when it is within our power?

If we cannot get funds enough for both high schools and "low" schools, is it not better to use sufficient of the county fund in this way than to put all or the bulk of it in a city or town high school which the "thirty and nine" can have but little hope to enter? Would not these "thirty and nine" by reason of their improved intelligence through these better teachers in time force the building of high schools for all?

The Laugh Cure.

Laughter induces a mental condition.

The value of laughing and hearty laughter will not only save, but make a doctor's bill, but will also save you years of your life.

There is good philosophy as well as good health in the maxim, "Laugh and grow fat."

Laughter is a free to gain and disease, and a sure cure for the most stubborn and worst.

Laughter is contagious, the more you and your friends laugh, the more you laugh.

CHEER OF THE OLD HOME

Something Which Every Man and Woman Should Be Able to Look Back Upon.

It would be a blessing if we parents could just reflect that it may be that the only cheer in life which our children will get is the cheer of the old home, writes Frank W. Gussak. They are hurrying out into the world which has no time to make them happy. If they are fortunate, as the world says, they will probably have homes, where old-fashioned and rampant cheerfulness would skin its shins against the furniture or break the Lous XIV. chair. Blessed old days, and most wholesome to look back upon, are those when the hearty laugh of father would not split the lace curtains, and when mother could have two big, healthy children upon her lap while she was sitting down, with safety to all parties, in her rocker. No coin on earth costs so little to mint and goes so far in paying life's heavy expenses as Good Cheer. Pessimists are made before children are ten years of age, and pessimism comes when a child cannot turn a golden laugh into ready cash for life's poverty and its relief. We talk about the cruelty of a father's depriving a child of sufficient clothing. It is too bad; but a child's toes would better be ruddy and his ears tingle with cold than to have a home with winter in the atmosphere and the smiles all freezing to death.

No child is prepared for the supremely serious things of life who cannot laugh away all the goblins and ghosts and break with the shining wand of Good Cheer the circle drawn around him by any giant.

LETTING THEIR LIGHT SHINE

But College Girls as Expert Launderesses Do Not Appeal to One New York Housewife.

College girls who have studied laundering in their domestic science course may some time find an opportunity to apply their knowledge without inconveniencing anybody, but they have not yet reached that idyllic stage.

"Just at present they are an intolerable nuisance," said a woman who has had indirect dealings with the young graduates. "Since they have undertaken to uplift the world through the medium of the wash tub I haven't had a stitch of clothes fit to put on."

"That is because they are trying to teach my laundress how to wash and iron. The poor soul has made a living at the wash tub for 13 years and has brought up four children, yet those scientific laundresses have concluded that she doesn't know her business."

There isn't a laundress in town that is safe from intrusion. Some women with Irish tempers won't be bothered, but my washerwoman is too gentle-mannered to refuse instruction, so for the last month she has been turning out her weekly wash with some sweet thing just out of college pottering around bossing the job.

"The poor woman is nearly crazy, and so are her customers. Maybe if left to themselves the girls can do a decent job at laundering; I know my washerwoman can, but when their methods clash both make a botch of the job and linen comes home buttonless, scorched, and torn."—New York Times.

Wycliffe's Prayers.

Among recent sales of relics and curios in London was that of Wycliffe's "Prayers of the Bible," of the date of 1527 or thereabout. "The rare old black letter of this work puts it," says the noted authority on curios, J. F. Blacker, "at once among the scarcest examples of old 'Flete Street' printing. The noble old divine died in 1384, shortly after he had completed his translation of the Bible into English. These prayers were 'imprinted' just about the time when the first English Bible was published by Tyndale in the years 1526-1532. The six parts realized £250, though a copy of each of the first four parts sold some time ago for £400."

Destroying Weeds in Ponds.

Copper sulphate is often used for destroying the scum-like weeds in ponds. But precautions must be taken, for unless the right proportion of sulphate is used any fish which may be in the pond will be injured. The proportion of copper sulphate used in the ponds at Kew Gardens is one part to from 750,000 to 1,000,000 parts of water. Sulphate of copper in a pulverized state is placed in a porous bag and dragged through the water until dissolved. The water in St. James's Park, London, it might be mentioned, has for two summers been kept free from scum by this method.—London Mail.

No Steel Pens in Tropics.

The ordinary steel pens used in temperate climates, particularly those used in the United States, are not adaptable to the tropics on account of rusting. This is especially true during the rainy season and at seaports. Bronze or brass pens, or those coated with bronze, do not seem to be thus affected. Ink deteriorates very quickly in tropical climates and often has the consistency of gum. On the ordinary steel pens this aids the rust and is hard to wipe off if left for a short time. With the bronze or brass pen or with a pen coated with bronze the ink is easily wiped or burnt off.

Babies and Dollars.

Governor Marshall, of Indiana, who is Governor Wilson's running mate for the presidency, says that a child-born in Indiana is to be in making money, and they believe that every dollar made should be so often that an infant may be a dollar on its feet.

Marshall made this statement in his speech of acceptance for a year day, at the course at which he said, "The mother of all special privileges is the high birth rate of Indiana."

We are a quarter from this, we presume, the day when from Indiana will be a dollar on its feet. Now, I don't know that, in order to have a dollar on its feet, we must destroy first of all.

We don't just now, and the reason was that, at the stage of New Jersey, there were more babies crying than in the house of infants than there were dollars, grain and uranium.

In those days the babies of our fathers were crying their teeth on their bones.

What the people of this country want is opportunity to earn the dollar. If they are given that, and the dollar they earn isn't close enough to suit them, they have the privilege of giving it away, of course.—Tribune Gazette.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional means. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous lining.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by local applications. Send for circulars free.

Two farmers had 20 apples each to sell. One sold his 20 for a penny, which brought him 15¢. The other sold his 20 for a penny, which brought him 15¢, or a total of 30¢ for his 40 apples. One farmer being sick, sent his 20 apples to market by the neighbor, who thought to save some work and put them together and sold 40 apples for two pennies. On returning home and counting up, he found that they had only brought him 20¢. What became of the other penny?

Ever Eat Watermelons?—A Few Suggestions.

Before watermelon is an art to be learned by experience. As a dessert it is not a success. It falls too heavily on a dinner. Like a party with 11 is best by itself. The melon should be cold. It should be ripe. Its flesh should be a rich pinkish red, its seeds should grow like a compass needle at the edge of day, and its temperature should be as chilly as the strip of a Brookbridge loogie. When you get such a melon, do not lay off after that. Open it, gaze upon it, bury your nose in its sweetness and let your appetite run riot. Its just like a negro hitting a brown gravy-fed pinkeye hole pinkeye first bite, last morsel, second bite, total rejection.—Brookbridge (Mae) Bulletin.

Repels Attack of Death

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Susan Green, Matamoras, Cal. "They told me I would die with consumption. I was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well; I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has created the grave of another victim." Be fully to suffer with coughs, colds or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price, 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body, and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breastbone, with a Mrs. M. D. McPherson, of Camden, Maine. I had suffered from it for some years. I also suffered from heartburn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines, but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not last out as it made me worse. When I ever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint. I had a very bad time and was from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took two bottles of it, and could not get it, getting better from the first dose. I could eat little without pain and was strong fast. Today I am strong and well and can do a big day's work without a pain or anything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my mail, so I am sure."

Gave Up Hope

"I suffered five years, with awful pains, due to womanly troubles," writes Mrs. M. D. McPherson, from Chadbourne, N. C. "They grew worse, till I would often faint. I could not walk at all, and I had an awful hurting in my side; also a headache and a backache.

I gave up and thought I would die, but my husband urged me to try Cardui, so, I began, and the first bottle helped me. By the time the third bottle was used, I could do all my work. All the people around here said I would die, but Cardui relieved me."

Tobin Plans a Holiday

By A. HOWARD

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Tobin Oliver, the artist, lived with his mother and little sister Clarissa in a rather nice boarding house; so nice, indeed, that in order to meet the board bill the Oliver had to tuck themselves away in two tiny rooms on the fourth floor back.

Tobin was a patient, kindly person, with hair thinning on his temples and a stoop to his shoulders which made him look very much older than he should, for he was still very young. When he was a boy he had had dreams, even as other young artists have, of painting pictures that would astound the world; but now that his father was dead and he had his mother and sister to support, he chiefly dreamed of dodging the laundryman, and spent his idle moments in figuring how to pay for Clarissa's schooling.

These calculations allowed of no margins for expensive recreation, yet Tobin was contemplating a piece of wild extravagance. Thus it was particularly disconcerting when Clarissa, deliberately abandoning her pose, turned her pleading eyes upon him. "Please, Tobin, can't I go to the circus?"

Clarissa was an uncomfortably clever child, with a pretty, eager face, and frightfully long legs. She was Tobin's only model, and posed for everything he did, from fat policemen and colored mammys, to fashion plates and soothing syrup babies. She was draped over a chair now, with mirror and powder puff in hand, and Tobin was drawing her as an advertisement for American Belle Beautifying Cream. He had no intention of taking her to the circus, so he pretended to be very busy with his picture, and assiduously splashed the paint on the highly colored cheeks of the American Belle.

But Clarissa was not thus easily silenced. She squirmed around in her chair and repeated insistently: "Please, Tobin, can't I go to the circus?"

If the American Belle was to be finished that day Clarissa must be humored, so Tobin answered discreetly: "I don't know whether you can or not. I'll think it over and see if it can be managed."

That quieted the trusting Clarissa, but Tobin began to feel shamefully deceitful. He knew that he was not going to take Clarissa to the circus, as he had already planned to take some one else, the most precious person in the world. For in the front room of Mrs. Hovey's fourth floor lived Tobin's inspiration, she who would have been the lady of his dreams if he had ever had time for dreaming. This Diana Garland was an energetic, happy little woman, with red hair and snappy eyes, and though she smiled very often in public Tobin wisely suspected that she cried rather often in private. Teaching music in a third-rate boarding school is not the ideal existence for a girl, and whenever an anxious pucker appeared on Diana's white brow, Tobin knew that she was feeling rather forlorn.

There was trouble at the boarding school one week and the pucker stayed so long on Diana's forehead that Tobin feared it was becoming permanent. He longed to comfort her, but there was nothing he could do until Diana remarked quite casually one morning that the circus was coming to town and that she would like to see the baby giraffe. That gave Tobin his opportunity. He knew it was a reckless waste of money, but what cared he for filthy lucre? He was too poor to offer Diana his hand and heart, but he could at least offer her a glimpse of the baby giraffe.

One wild act brings on another, and having determined to take Diana to the circus, Tobin found himself still further involved in financial embarrassments. The American Belle did not bring in as much as he had expected, and when he went to buy the tickets he found that he would have to use Clarissa's commission. As he supported Clarissa and willingly sacrificed his life to hers, there seemed no real reason why he should pay her for posing, but it had been his invariable custom to give her a fragmentary share of all that he made on his pictures. In keeping back Clarissa's earnings Tobin felt as guilty as if he had robbed a bank, even though he promised himself that he would pay her back some day.

However, he bought the tickets, bought them early in the week, for he knew by sad experience that money has a way of escaping even when you have made the best of plans for its future. Once they were purchased and safely stowed away in his pocket a change came over the artist, his conscience ceased to prick him and he felt strangely light-hearted, like a gay, irresponsible truant. In all the years of patient drudgery since his father died Tobin had taken no holidays, and now he reveled in the joys of anticipation. He looked at the tickets every morning to be sure that they were safe, but he said nothing to Diana, for it was to be a great surprise. Every Wednesday night Diana went with Tobin's rival, William Hutt, to a moving picture show, and every Saturday afternoon she walked with Tobin through the park. He knew just how she would smile when he told her that, instead of walking in the park, they were to go to the circus together. Diana had a funny, sweet little smile that drove away the pucker from her brow.

So pleasant was this thought that Tobin forgot all about Clarissa until the end of the week. On Friday night he worked late at a downtown art exhibit, but on his way home he stopped to buy a bag of peanuts for the little girl. Clarissa could not go to the circus, but she could feed the squirrels in the park.

The house was in ink darkness when he reached home, for Mrs. Hovey wasted no gas on late arrivals, and it was only by groping cautiously along that Tobin mounted to the fourth floor. All was blackness there except where a faint stream of light shone beneath Diana's door. He was watching that light and wondering why Diana was up so late when the door opened and a girl crept out into the hall. She closed the door behind her and again the hall was absolutely dark, but Tobin knew that she was coming toward him. He stood still, fascinated, and his heart began to pound loudly. Although he could see nothing, he could hear the soft swish of her garments as she approached. He felt that he should go, but his strength seemed to have deserted him. Then in the darkness his hand touched hers. She drew away, but Tobin held her and spoke quickly: "Diana, dearest, it's only Tobin. Don't be frightened."

The girl stood still; they were alone in the darkness, the other boarders were peacefully snoring, and somehow Tobin's arms went around her. She leaned against him with her face hidden in his coat, and Tobin, who had fought against his love so long and bravely, lost his senses for a time and began to tell her hurriedly, hotly, all his longing for her.

If she made no answer she made no resistance, and rapturously he stooped and kissed her hair and forehead. "Diana, darling," he begged, "say that you love me. I have no right to ask you, but say that you love me a little."

He held her against his heart, but with a sudden movement she lenced away from him, and a match flared out in the darkness. Across its circle of light Tobin looked at the girl, and his arms slowly fell to his side. It was Clarissa, her face all drawn up with suppressed giggles, and in her eyes the scornful, unsympathetic glare of a twelve-year-old.

"I went to Diana's room to get some matches," she explained in a whisper. "I think there's a mouse in our wardrobe."

Then as the light flickered out she leaned toward him eagerly, insistent. "Tobin, if I promise not to tell the boarders will you take me to see the circus?"

Tobin shook his head. "I don't care," he said doggedly, "who knows that I love Diana."

"Maybe not," continued Clarissa shrewdly, "but if the boarders know this they'll laugh at Diana."

So Clarissa saw the circus.

London's Homeless.
On the night of February 9 last 1,203 persons were found homeless in London, this being the smallest number on record. The figure was made up of 978 men, 213 women, and 12 young persons. The night was wet at first, then fine, and not cold; 25 men and 23 women were found on staircases and under arches.

The London county council report, which publishes these figures, states that although the number of homeless women was less by 108 than in 1911, there was no corresponding increase in the use made of common lodging houses, casual wards, and free shelters. The districts where most of the men were found were the city, 140; Stepney, 122; Westminster, 187; and Islington, 71.

In common lodging houses there were 19,710 men, 1,373 women, 196 couples and 24 children; while there were the following vacant beds, 5,642 men, 1,082 women and 49 couples; 40 free beds in institutions were also unoccupied on the night of the homeless census.

Week the Minimum Honeymoon.
A man should be compelled by law to take at least a week off for his honeymoon in the opinion of Justice Platt. T. J. O'Neill, a lawyer, asked Justice Platt for a three-day adjournment of a case which came up for trial before him the other day, on the ground that he was about to be married, and wished not to be deprived of a wedding trip. But Mr. O'Neill's specific request was denied by the court, which ruled that three days was insufficient and a week none too much for a man about to be married.

Her First Case

By JEAN M. COLMER

Elizabeth returned from her first ambulance class flushed, but elated.

For the first time in her not-too-eventful existence of twenty-one years, Elizabeth was roused. The call to arms was sounding; brave men flocked to join the reserve force; brave women felt the call also and did their utmost to nip their incompetency in the bud. Elizabeth, too, was carried away by the universal enthusiasm, and, with feelings of excitement not unmixed with alarm, she attended classes of "first-aid," and rejoiced to feel herself at last a useful member of the community.

Elizabeth in her ardor became even more trying to the family circle than in her previous lethargic state. No room in the home and no member of the household could escape the merciless hand of Elizabeth in all the first fire of her patriotic enthusiasm. The drawing-room, an elegant apartment upholstered in the best of taste, became littered with improvised splints and rolls of coarse material, known to Elizabeth as the "Esmark" bandage.

Everybody down to the second footman had undergone his share of torture while Elizabeth, with untiring energy, did head or "cranium" bandages, and practiced also how to make a broken arm comfortable until the arrival of the doctor. Upon one memorable occasion she had improvised a splint from the board of a packing case, and quite overlooking the fact that there were four bent and rusty nails protruding from it, she pressed with her usual vigor upon the butler's arm, and only found out the mistake when the unhappy man cried out with pain, and displayed a hand mutilated and bleeding. This, however, furnished a new and most entertaining test for Elizabeth's skill, who did not rest until her victim retired, pale and trembling, with arm in sling, and looks which expressed the most acute suffering.

On yet another occasion Elizabeth seized upon her father, who was going off in state to a dinner at which royalty was expected. She insisted upon his waiting while she demonstrated to him the correct way of dealing with a broken collar-bone. A pad being necessary to place beneath the patient's arm, and her father being in a very great hurry, Elizabeth could think of nothing better suited to her needs than a sponge. She accordingly fetched one, and placed it beneath her parent's arm, and, unfortunately, she realized too late that a sponge should be carefully squeezed before being placed upon a court suit of velvet.

But even if Elizabeth's zeal did at times outrun her performance, her intentions were undeniably good, and her family, though not well versed themselves in the subject of "first-aid," was justly proud of their patriotic daughter.

The first course of lectures was drawing to a close, the examination was at hand, and what Elizabeth felt she most needed was practical experience.

She roamed the park daily in search of accidents. She frequently visited the Rotten Row, and found herself fervently longing that some unfortunate individual might see fit to break a limb. Elizabeth's search, however, remained for many weeks unrewarded. She became quite despondent, and indeed almost lost her faith in the easiness of motor 'buses. Had she been able to drive her own car, doubtless her efforts would have frequently met with success; but Richards, the chauffeur, who had suffered acutely in Elizabeth's hands more than once, was wise enough to drive away more prudently than ever.

Elizabeth now never left the house without a pair of scissors and a box of safety pins in her pocket. She relied upon her patting, or even her skirt, for bandage, and carried an umbrella in all weathers, which in an emergency could quickly be converted into a splint.

At last the great day came; but unfortunately it did not come at a time when Elizabeth was entirely prepared. She was going out to lunch, and consequently was magnificently clothed in a Directoire. As it is impossible to carry scissors and safety pins in a Directoire costume, and as an umbrella would be decidedly in the way, Elizabeth was not so fully equipped for emergency as was her custom.

It happened in this way. As Elizabeth passed the park gates in her motor, a young man rode out into the road. His horse was nervous, and chose to take fright at the big car. Elizabeth did not see clearly just what happened, which was not surprising, as she shut her eyes and placed her fingers firmly in her ears as the horse began to plunge.

To be quite fair, however, Elizabeth recovered quickly, and flinging open the window, ordered Richards to pull up instantly. She then dismounted, splendidly Directoire as she was, and ran quickly through the mud to where the young man lay in the midst of a swiftly gathering crowd.

Forcing her way to his side, she took in the situation at a glance. Pushing away the policeman who was supporting the boy's head, she pulled off her Directoire jacket, and rolling it into a ball with fine carelessness, she placed it in the mud as a support to the young man's shoulders. Imagine her surprise when, as she was about to make an elaborate "cranium bandage" upon the Esmark basis, a stalwart young woman forced her way through the crowd and knelt down at his other side with a look of great determination upon her stern features. Elizabeth was nonplussed, and regarded her rival with annoyance, which became more acute as she watched the young woman produce scissors and pins from her pocket and an immense handkerchief from her sleeve.

Elizabeth got up from her knees and looked round her in dismay to have her lawful prey snatched from her thus was too much. As she stood there in great indecision, her eye fell upon another female form forcing itself to the center of the crowd. The newcomer, a fair girl of seventeen or so, advanced rapidly and with a business-like air, rolling up her sleeves as she came. The sight of another in possession did not seem to disturb her in the least; she knelt also in the mud, and for lack of something better to do, fell to mopping the brow of the prostrate young man with a two-inch handkerchief. Elizabeth's gaze grew wilder, she took a step backward and turned to flee. As she did so, she collided violently with a girl who, armed with rolls of "Esmark," was flying towards the scene of action. Elizabeth pressed her brow in anguish. She caught the policeman's eye—even he was smiling, and a subdued titter went round the crowd.

With a shudder Elizabeth gathered up her clinging skirts, now decorated with huge patches of mud, and fled away through the press. With a cry of joy she saw the motor drawn up beside the curb, and with a sob she flung herself inside and slammed the door.

It was only when she had left the scene of action far behind that Elizabeth thought of her Directoire jacket lying in a puddle beneath the young man's shoulders. The thought was too much for her and she dissolved into tears.

Good Reason for His Action.
In Germany during a war a captain of cavalry was ordered out upon a foraging expedition. He marched to the district assigned to him. It was a lonely valley, but finding in the midst of it a small cottage, he knocked at the door. It was opened by an old man, who leaned upon a staff. "Father," said the officer, "show me a field where I may set my troop to forage." The old man led them out of the valley and after a quarter of an hour's march they came to a fine field of barley. "Here is what we are in search of," exclaimed the captain. "Wait a few minutes," said the old man. "Follow me a little further." At the distance of a mile they arrived at another field of barley. The troop alighted, cut down the grain, trussed it and rode off. The officer then said to his conductor: "You have given yourself and us needless trouble; the first field was better than this." "Very true, sir," replied the good old man, "but it was not mine."

Sun and Fire Symbols.
There are to be found occasionally upon the walls of old brick houses, at about the line of division between the first and second stories, flat pieces of iron five or six inches in length and shaped somewhat like the letter "S." The use of these articles was clearly brought from England, where it is still continued, and there is a curious origin and meaning attached to them. The figure in question is an early symbol of the sun. It is still used in Herefordshire and other parts of England. There one is informed that the reason for the particular form of these irons is that they were made thus in order to protect the house from fire as well as from collapse.—Harper's Weekly.

How the Alsatian Was Saved.
The Kaiser's bombardings against Alsace-Lorraine recall a story illustrating the state of feeling between the French and Germans in Alsace. An Alsatian fell into the Rhine. He was unable to swim, but he managed to lay hold on a log and screamed out in his native French for help. A German policeman standing on the bank regarded him with a cold eye, but took no further notice. The drowning man, straining his native pride, repeated his cry in German, but still the policeman stood coldly watching him. Then an inspiration came to the man in the water. "Vive la France!" he cried. And the policeman immediately plunged into the river and arrested him.

Jesus, Lover of My Soul.

Religion has always been wedded to song, whatever the stage of civilization, or the form of worship. Religion and melody have acted and reacted upon the religious life of the world, until it is easy to understand how the largest and most permanent contribution one can make to the religious life is to write for a new song which will lift it on the wings of praise and prayer to the higher things.

The greatest hymn written by uninspired man is undoubtedly "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," written by Charles Wesley.

It stands next to and possibly beside the Twenty-third Psalm—the little brown thread of all earth songs, home-ly, but sweet to human hearts: "The Lord is My Shepherd." Wesley's hymn shares with David that honor of bringing peace and comfort to the largest multitudes; to have been the earliest hymn in childhood and the last to linger on the tongue when the singer crosses the bar.

"Jesus, Lover of My Soul," is one of the noblest expressions of Christian faith and hope in all literature and so shares with the Twenty-third Psalm the first place in the hearts of Jesusands as the two voice the prayers of Christendom.

Charles Wesley wrote this hymn at the age of 32, and the story of its origin is that he stood by an open window on a summer day, and a little bird, frightened by a thunderstorm, flew in to the room and sought refuge there; this incident inspired the writing of this hymn.

Henry Ward Beecher, speaking of his father's death and his love for this hymn, said: "I would rather have written that hymn of Wesley's than to have the wealth of the richest millionaire of New York. He will die and pass out of men's thoughts, but that hymn will go on singing until the last trumpet brings forth the angel band and I think it will mount up to the very throne of God."

PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

For President,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
For Vice President,
GOV. HIRSHAM JOHNSON.

No better County Committee has ever been selected for Ohio County than the one named by the Progressives of Ohio County last Saturday.

Every indication points to the election of Senator Beveridge as Governor of Indiana. He is outstripping Wilson and Roosevelt both, wherever a straw vote has been taken.

The Hartford Herald is seeking to prove that it is not supporting Taft by the Green River Republican, a sheet which does not hesitate to lie about the Senatorial fight of this paper and to endorse Conventional thievery. Not very reliable evidence for the local Taft organ.

The Straw Vote which is being taken by the Cincinnati Enquirer in a number of States shows a very favorable condition for the Progressives in the City of Louisville. At the Avery Flow Works and the Kentucky Wagon Works, the Roosevelt vote amounted to over 500, with Wilson running second with less than one third as many, and not more than 30 to 40 indicating a preference for Mr. Taft.

It has been suggested that this paper should change its name because it is supporting the Progressive ticket. Of course, this is not seriously contended by persons of average intelligence. We assume those who take this view of it would have the Globe-Democrat, the great Republican newspaper published at St. Louis, change its name also. Republicanism is Democracy and Democracy is Republicanism in the true sense of the word, and both of them should be progressive. If they are not progressive, the present organization known as the Progressive Party will swallow both of them in time.

There is every indication of a great slump throughout the country for Roosevelt and Johnson, and many persons who lauded at the idea of the success of the Progressive ticket a month ago, now shake their heads and say nothing. While this transformation among the voters is going on, which is absolutely crushing the old Republican party, there is growing evidence that the standstillers among the Republicans, have decided to support Governor Wilson, either because they have some understanding with him, or through the hope that the bosses who are in control of more than half of the State Organizations in the Democratic party, will do little to congeal him, once he is in the White House. Democratic Progressives should make a note of this, and go in this with their friends, and those who are honestly trying to do something for the common people.

A vote for Taft is a vote for Wilson, and our Democratic friends and newspaper generally understand this. It is impossible to get any of them to criticize Mr. Taft, while they are all bitterly denouncing Col. Roosevelt and the Progressive ticket. This should be sufficient for any voter who is opposed to Wilson, to get in line for the Progressive party. The average Democratic politician can see danger as far as anyone, and they have correctly divined that the danger to their success, not only in this campaign, but in future campaigns, is from the new party, and not from the old Republican party, which has fallen into the hands of discredited bosses, and those who would deprive the people of self-government by packing county, state and national committees, and changing delegations to conventions, and nominating men of their choice, no matter what the sentiment of the people may be.

The organized farmers of Ohio county who desire to obtain good prices for their commodities will do well to study the program of Governor Wilson, the Democratic candidate for President.

He proposes to lower the price of living by lowering the price of farm products, and admits that this will be offset by the lowering of prices on commodities which the farmer is compelled to purchase. This is a dangerous and a sure way which the long-headed farmer will not be drawn. When the tariff is smashed, the home market will also be smashed, down with the farm prices; the wages of the laborer will also be smashed, and if boots and shoes should be reduced to 50 cents a pair, the average man will not be in possession of the 50 cents. Governor Wilson has said in one speech that he believes in reducing the tariff by degrees, that tinkering with the tariff will disturb the business conditions of the country. In a more recent speech he has compared the tariff tinkering to the modern surgeon, and has said that it required the services of the skillful surgeon. This can only mean one thing, and that is that the Protective Tariff under President Wilson would be cut out by the roots, and foreign products, not only from Canada, but from all over the world, would be kept in competition with those of this country.

Better Stop, Look and Listen.

The iron and steel workers of Japan have longer hours than American workers in the same trades, and they receive from 20 cents to 60 cents per day.

If the American laborer was placed on this basis "Home would howl," and yet some people are anxiously working to lower the American industries with those of Japan and other cheap labor countries through the Democratic Tariff for revenue only Free-Trade policies. Better stop, look and listen.—St. Marys (W. Va.) Leader.

In Receptive Attitude.

Prof. Barksdale Hamlett, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, says he will not solicit funds from the teachers of Kentucky for the Wilson campaign.

Prof. Hamlett thinks the teachers of Kentucky ought to be glad to give something to the campaign fund, because Woodrow Wilson was a teacher.

It is possible a few of them may feel that for reasons political, sentimental or otherwise, they would like to chip in a dollar from their hard earned savings along with bigger but no more coshery efforts of Millionaire Mayo and Coffey Camden.

If such be their impulse there are regular channels through which they may make their contributions. The mail will carry it to the State Campaign Committee just as easily as to Barksdale Hamlett.

Why then, Prof. Hamlett with hat in hand?

Why, if not to impress the teachers of Kentucky with the thought, that, apart from politics, it may be polite for them to come across?

Prof. Hamlett's explanation is not satisfactory. His attitude in this matter is inexcusable, improper and contrary to the best interests of educational work in Kentucky. We will be surprised if he does not hear in vigorous protest from some of the best friends of the State's public schools.—Louisville Herald

ROSINE.

Sept. 17.—The continued warm weather and lack of rain has caused some inconvenience and so the good rain which has lately fallen was very thankfully received by all.

Quite a number from this place attended the quarterly conference which was held at Mt. Vernon church on Sept. 16.

Our Sunday School continues to manifest the usual interest in spite of the hot weather.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Mr. Oscar Stewart. We consider ourselves very fortunate to have such a teacher.

Mrs. Pleasant Wayne Farris preached at the Baptist church Saturday evening and Sunday at 11 a. m. His sermons were much enjoyed by all who heard them.

Mrs. Nola Young who has been in poor health for some time is somewhat improved.

Miss Sue Pierce has returned from a short visit to George Branch.

Mr. Talton Embury has his new house almost completed.

The Methodist church which was struck several weeks ago by lightning, has been repaired.

Opening of Hartford College.

Hartford College began her thirty-third year's work last Monday, Sept. 16. Temporary quarters were secured for the High School Department in Fraternity Hall. The Grammar and Intermediate grades over Harvard's store, and the Primary grades in the Court Hall.

The various locations have proven to be sufficient until the new school building is ready. Full attendance has been reported in all departments, Miss Marks having the highest number, 150 in primary grades.

After a long vacation both teachers and pupils are enthusiastic in the work and we predict in spite of some inconveniences, one of the most successful years in the history of this well known institution.

FORMER OHIO COUNTY

BOY IS WONDER

Ray Chapman Is Sensation In

Base Ball
World.

The following concerning Ray Chapman appeared recently in the baseball column of The Louisville Herald. Mr. Chapman formerly resided in this county and is well known by many here.

From the infancy of a country town high school line to the American League in three years—such has been the flash across the baseball firmament of Ray Chapman, the chain-lightning short stop of the Cleveland club and the latest sensation of baseball.

Like Ralph Chapin, that other sensation of the association, Chapman is a good marvel. He used to do a hundred yards in 10 to 15 seconds and the 220 yards in 21 feet, when a student in the Herpin, H. H. high school and was quite some football player.

Chapman has been burning up the American Association this season, and it was only a question of time when he would be sold traded or drafted into one of the major leagues.

If there was any likelihood of a fair chance at Chapman, the record of $22,500 set by Barney Dreyfuss when he bought Marty O'Leary would be broken.

In fact Frank Farrell, owner of the New York American League club, has said he would make this price look cheap if Somers would pay his star upon the block.

But Somers isn't selling Chapman—not while the Naps need men like him—and they do right now. At the beginning of the season Olson was the Nap catcher, but a little master of boxing skill between him and Pitcher Mitchell resulted in his reduction to the ranks and the appointment of the brains of the Cleveland team—Joe Murnighan.

Chapman is a short stop and a whirlwind short stopper. He has a powerful throwing arm and the ability to throw from almost any position. He is so fast that he gets in front of the ball when another would be trying for it with his finger tips.

Every big league scout has looked at Chapman this summer, although each knew the time was wasted.

In forty-eight games Chapman stole twenty bases, and from his position as clean-up batter, fourth, scored thirty-seven runs. He made sixty-one hits, his average being .33. And best of all, he hits the punches. His fighting has been sensational and his base running one of the marvels of the game.

Chapman hesitated when he left high school, between a scholastic inducement and a contract from the Springfield (Ill.) League club, finally accepting the latter.

Lack of experience held him back and Springfield was about to release him when Davenport of same league bought him for $250. This was a league joke, but in a short time Chapman had them all watching him.

Bill Armour, then president of the Toledo club, bought Chapman for $1500 last summer. Chapman played for Toledo one month last fall, but it was late and his skill was overplayed. On the first trip this spring he spent like an explosion of gun cotton and has continued at the same rapid pace.

Chapman is the real thing, a sure enough and if he plays the same game on the big ring that he has everywhere else his name will become a household necessity before the punch rope is pulled.

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of colic, diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all druggists.

What Does it Profit a Farmer.

The former shirks the Protection Tariff affords the mechanic in the production of a market for all the produce their farms can grow. They know, or at least we think they do, that when the workmen of the village are idle, have little or no money to spend, the demand for farm products falls off and they which is sold brings small prices and no profit to the producer.

What does it profit a farmer to be able to buy a plough, or a harrow, or an axe, a hammer, a saw or a grain chaffer at 25 or 50 per cent. less than the tariff prices of such articles, when farm products sell 50 and 100 per cent. less than the tariff prices? That is not an even drawn argument. During the Free-Trade years from 1893 to 1896, butter that is now selling for 50 cents a pound sold for 25 cents or less, eggs that now sell at from 30 to 40 cents a dozen sold for 15 to 25 cents a dozen. All other farm and dairy products sold at similarly low prices. Even with cheap low prices the demand fell far short of the supply. The surplus was of no value. What benefit was there then?

How to the farmer?—Dover (N.H.) Sentinel.

Reunion Near Cromwell.

In the early part of the nineteenth century William Shields, an old veteran of the war of 1812, who was in battle at New Orleans, located near the site where Cromwell was afterward born. His wife died in the year of 1851 and he in 1880, leaving a family who have multiplied until there is a large progeny and they kept a reunion at the family grave yard last Saturday. After doing some work repairing the yard they had an hour of regressive service.

Rev. Breh Shields, of Hickport, Ky., read the 5th chapter of Exodus, an appropriate one for the occasion, after which was prayer by Brother Zeb Taylor. Rev. Shields then preached from the following text, "Why should I be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" Acts 26th chapter, 8 verse, after which it was announced that there was dinner on the ground for all and all were invited to eat. After dinner we dispersed to enjoy the blessing of Home, Sweet Home.

OLATON.

Sept. 18.—Emma, the little son of Archie and Florence Mitchell, died at 11 o'clock Friday night, September 13th, of Diphtheria, after an illness of two days; aged 1 year, 11 months and 55 days. Interment was in the Olaton Baptist Cemetery, September 14th, at 3 o'clock p. m. Rev. Marion Harris delivered a beautiful and impressive talk at the grave. The beautiful floral offerings, the deep and tender deeds and words of sympathy were a fitting tribute to the memory of the dear departed, and were expressive of the high regard in which these loved neighbors are held. The songs "Smile!" "I'm Glad I'm One of Them" and "In Going Home" were delivered in a very impressive manner by the Baptist and Methodist choir.

The protracted meeting which was to have begun at the Baptist church the 15th, was postponed until the 19th because the pastor, Bro. Shigley, could not be here as early as the 15th. The revival if continued will probably back much of the interest which is usually manifested here in weeks of this kind because of the fact of the epidemics of Typhoid and Diphtheria which is so prevalent in this section, however, we hope the conditions will prove successful, and much and lasting good be accomplished.

Miss Martha J. Wing of Paducah Rock, spent a week the guest of her son, Mr. Albert N. Wing a Street Car Mechanic, at Evansville, Ind. He accompanied her home for a several days stay the guest of friends and relatives at Paducah Rock, and Olaton.

Mrs. Dr. Jesse S. Ryan spent several days as the guest of her father Mr. Harrison, at Logansport.

Miss Garnett Evelyn Rappley attended the Horse Branch Barbecue the 14th.

Mrs. Ira D. Daniel and daughter, little Miss Phoebe, of Lexington, N. Dak., are guests of T. N. Steele and Ethel Dan and other relatives in the Olaton and Paducah neighborhoods.

Mr. Edward C. Taylor the portrait man, visited at Mr. Washington and Louisville, Ky., several days.

Admiral P. Dockery was down from Paducah, Sagarday, where he had been attending the Nelson Vaudeville shows.

Mr. James O. Sisson, contractor-builder, has been at Henderson, Ky., several weeks.

Several Olaton people attended the Barbecue at Hartford the 14th.

Pastor Russell Also Points Out That the Gospel of Faith Healing is Another of the Many Substitutes For the Greatest of All Gospels.

Pastor Russell

Providence, R. I.,
Sept. 15.—In Providence Opera House
Pastor Russell took for his text St. Paul's words, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another Gospel, which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and that would pervert the Gospel of Christ; . . . let him be accursed."—Galatians I, 6-9.

When we remember that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism presented in the Bible, we are astounded to find many faiths, many "Gospels," presented by many denominations, all bearing the name of Christ.

Although the Apostle was one of the pioneers of the Church, even in his day the brethren in Galatia had turned away to a perverted Message. No wonder, then, that the true Gospel had become almost buried under human tradition!

It will not do to say that we have many denominations, but only one Gospel. Denominations were not organized for amusement, but because the founders of each believed that they saw sufficient reason to justify them in forming a new sect.

Galatians' Perverted Gospel Prevalent Today.

The perverted Gospel which the Galatians were disposed to accept is very prevalent today, and is as much to be reprehended. The so-called Gospel about which St. Paul took them to task consisted of an admixture of the remnants of the Jewish Law and the Grace of God.

This perverted Gospel was that in addition to believing on Christ it was necessary to become Jews.

Many Christians are still making the same mistake; they do not appreciate the Master's statement, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Pastor Russell charged that from the most prominent pulpits of Christendom the Gospel of Christ respecting the forgiveness of individual sin, the reconciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit and the personal walk in newness of life have been discarded.

"Many of the preachers, having had no such experiences themselves, were loath to talk about them. But salaries must go on and something must be said. The message of the hour, therefore, is athletics, manliness, position in society, attention to political duties, attainment of high positions in the world—and money withal!"

Far be it from me to teach inattention to the duties and responsibilities of life. The Gospel of Jesus, however, distinctly impresses upon all His followers that their consecration to walk in His steps means their separation from worldly ambitions and from giving of chief concern to the preservation of their earthly lives. It exhorts that these are to be considered secondary to the new ideals set before them in the Gospel of Christ.

Elect to Bless the Non-Elect.

At this point Pastor Russell struck to the root of his subject. He pointed out the almost complete failure to recognize the great "Divine Plan of the Ages"—hidden for 4000 years—and in the days of the Apostles made known. He recognized that God is now conducting an Election according to fitness, and that after this He will use the Elect in the work of blessing the non-elect.

The followers of Jesus are not at liberty to adopt theories, either of their own or those of others in respect to the way in which the great work of uplifting the world is to be accomplished. They are co-laborers with God—and not with men.—II. Corinthians vi, 1.

Pastor Russell then proceeded to outline the Divine Plan as recorded in the Scriptures. He showed that God's purpose is, first, to select the Church, and then to uplift all those of the non-elect awaiting the summons to "Come forth . . . to a resurrection by judgment," for "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."—Acts xxiv, 15; John v, 28, 29, R. V.

The resurrection by judgment will prove to be successful beyond the fondest hope. In proof of this we have, for instance, the Scripture, "When the judgments of the Lord shall be in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."

The greatest perversion of the Gospel of Christ is the Gospel of Purgatory and eternal torture. And the Gospel of Faith Healing is opposed both to the letter and spirit of Jesus' teachings. Not one of the Lord's disciples nor a Prophet was healed miraculously.

The miracles which Jesus performed were upon outsiders and were but illustrations of how He and His Elect, in Kingdom glory, will in the coming Age uplift and restore all the willing and obedient.

Haminy—To one gallon of water, add one heaping tablespoonful of lye. Let what corn the solution will cover, and let come to a boil; then wash through about seven or eight changes of clear water. Hot Pepper Cakes, No. 1.—Boil until tender half gallon of red pepper pods in water enough to cover. Add, while boiling a tablespoonful each of macaroni and allspice. Run through a sieve and add one quart of apple vinegar. Boil until thick and brittle. One pound of sugar may be added while boiling, if desired.

Sheep Are Weed Eaters.

Sheep are one kind of live stock that can be handled advantageously in connection with extensive grain growing, because of the fact that they are great weed-eaters. Horses and cattle will eat only about one-fourth of the variety of weeds that sheep consume greedily. Where the weed problem is one of importance a flock or two of sheep are of great benefit. While the weed problem can be handled by proper cultivation this cultivation can be greatly facilitated by keeping the right kind of animals on the land, and in addition to solving the weed problem the productivity of the soil also will be maintained.

Anything that will destroy weeds is worthy of the farmer's attention; anything that will maintain the fertility of the land demands his attention. Sheep will do both, and are therefore entitled to the attention of every grower in a dry-farming country.

The Advertising Trend.

"When circus men go back on a bill boards it marks the beginning of the end of that form of advertising."

"The grapefruit oranges implicated in the scandal and in turning from them to newspapers the circus advertiser inaugurates a departure from a tradition and custom which have unquestionably held up many a fortune. While still a novelty, billboards told story and were effective. But in the world multiplication they no longer made the impression they once did."

"Newspapers give improved results. They reach the class of people you want to interest. Where one person read newspapers and magazines thirty years ago hundreds read them now. It is to the papers every one goes to find the records of births, deaths, marriages, wedding predictions, wall street quotations, prices of stocks and everything else that is going on in the world."

"The circus men figures correctly that 99 per cent of the people will look for the same place to see about the coming of the circus."—Los Angeles Weekly.
